U.N. troops and the forces

battle, The DH.366MA first struggle

ended with defeat for the U.N., and its Secretary-General Mr. Dag Hammarskjold, lost his Hammarskjold, lost his life in an attempt to end the unequal fight, Today, the battle is more even. U.N. forces are better equipped, more determined and have received the support of jet fighters. Nevertheless Mr. Tshombe has shown many times that his shown many times that his capacity for resistance and his resilience are astonishing, and the outcome of the fight is still unpredictable.

The present action of the United Nations, like ing complex and farreaching problems. The is-sue now is not only the future of the Congo, but of the U.N. itself. Will the world organization be merely, as Mr. Hammarskield said a "conference machinery" or will it become a ven-ture in international government? Since the start Congo operation some 18 months ago this problem has beclouded all the efforts of the U.N. secretariat. Angered by the rapid intervention of U.N. in the Congo, intervention which prevented action of his since been striving, by refusal to help finance the Congo operation, by votes and vetoes and through a campaign to replace the Secretary-General by a three-man committee, to transform the U.N. back into a conference machi-nery only, at least as long as it shows signs of mov-ing in what he considers

Mr. O'Brien, the Irishman was recently resigned his post of U.N. Rapresentative in Katanga, claims that Britain and France have belped prevent the U.N. in Katanga from taking decisive action. They want it to remain if not merely a conference machinery at least no more than machinery for peaceful persuasion. But Mr. Tshombe has refused to be persuaded and has rejected a federal solution for the Congo as a whole. He insists on a confederate organization at the most, in effect a loose union of soveneign states. Mr. Adoula, the moderate Prime Minister of the Congo, is convinced that such a union could not survive and is himself under too much pressure by the Lumumbist partisans for the establishment of a strong central government to the abile to wield to Mr. Mr. O'Brien, the Irishman strong central government to be able to yield to Mr. Tshombe's essential demands, even if he wishes to.

wrong direction.

As he has no means to imhis will. Mr Adoula has pose his will, Mr. Adoula has asked the U.N. to help, threatening that otherwise he will ask aid from the states of the Casablanca Group and of the Eastern Bloc. The of the Cassblanca Group and of the Eastern Bloc. The choice for the U.N. is hard. If the U.N. troops fail to break Katangese resistance, the Central Government is likely to fall under the influence of the Lumumbist extremists or simply to collapse, with the whole of the Congo falling back into anarchy. But to impose by force an end to the semi-independence of Katanga is a risky task. It will not be an easy job for the few thousand men of the U.N. force to break the resistance of the 10,000 strong Katangese Gendarmerie, well armed and well led by European officers and supported by tribes loyal to Mr. Tshombe, Even if the U.N. should succeed for a time in this ampleasant task twill certainly be unable to prevent; European officers from continuing to lead a guerilla resistance which would destroy U.N. morale This could only lead to chaos in Katanga, where up to now a state of relative order has reigned. Deprived of their European officers the Katangese troops may show themselves just as undisciplined reigned. Deprived of their European officers the Katangeae troops may show them selves just as undisciplined as other Congolese soldiers and create the bloody disorder that has beset the rest of the country.

The more one looks at the situation the more one sees that there is only one solution; quick action on the part of the big powers. Events have proved that the U.N. cannot do much without the support of the big powers and even less against the open or silent opposition or any of them. East and West have no vital interest in the Congo, and the Congolese politicians are too unpredictable to serve even as pawns in the Cold War. Strong diplomatic action by the great powers, for once united could still bring Mr. Tshembe to reason and oblige him to cooperate with the Central

U Sein Win, the spirited editor of the English language daily "Guardian," which is close to Burmese Army circles and equally critical of all political parties, yesterday published an editorial on Mr. Ben-Gurion's visit, stressing the quid pro quarelationship between Burma, and Israel, Israel giving technical aid to Burma and Burma "acting as a shield against criticism of Israel as an aggressive power in the Middle East."

"Burma has supplied all the moral reasons for Israel's continued existence, whereas the Western countries have recognized Israel as a matter of hard-headed politics.

It is our hope Israel will remember this whenever they have reason to get annoyed with Burma for commercial reasons. Burma is the only country which has consistently defended the existence of Israel even at the expense of its friendship with the Arabs."

According to officially inspired press reports here, President de Gaulle has conceded the FLN's two main demands, namely the unity of Algerian territory, meaning the bestowal of Sahara on the new State, and the unity of the Algerian people, signifying the denial of special political status for the minority, such as is applied in Cyprus, for instance.

On the other hand, certain guarantees for the minority will solemnly be proclaimed by the FLN together with the cease-fire, whereby it is hoped—as Paris Radio put it—"reconciliation between the communities will be as heartwarming as their past antagonism was heart-rending."

The future Franco-Algerian cooperation pact, the main principles of which have already been determined in secret negotiations, will cover the lease of Algerian military and air bases to France and joint exploitation of Sahara off.

African 'Colony' At Binyanei Ha'ooma

By YITZHAK FIRESTONE Jerusalem Post Reporter

The flags of 19 resurgent African nations were raised last night at a colourful ceremony in Jerusalem's Binyanei Ha'ooma in celebration of independence of Tanganyika, whose green, black,
and gold flags were prominent on the flower-bedecked stage.

A score of young Tanganyikans presently studying in Israel sang their country's national anthem to start the proceedings. Then the Independence Day address of Prime Minister Julius Nyerere was read, followed by a message from Premier BenGurion.

The fact remains that the President, despite the colossal load of foreign and domestic business, cares enough about this particular ally to fly to British territory and spend two days alone with the Prime Minister.

The British Government also certainly rates Nato as more vital than the United Nations, but it takes far less a catastrophic view of the Communist challenge. Above all, it refuses to co. ider the possibilities of war to the same extent as do the Americans.

There will be no dispute between the two leaders over Berlin and Germany. Mr. Macmillan has already accepted the American line and waived his earlier ideas on demilitarizing Central Europe, But on South-east Asia, differences are still acute; Mr. Kennedy by now feels that the Americans must go all the way — including, if necessary, direct military action — to keep the Communists out of South Victnam. They are working on what is known here as the "dominon theory" — the belief that if South Victnam goes, alight the other countries of South-least Asia, will topple with the rest of Asia, the Middle East.

No expense seems to have been spared to make this evening a success and the array of performing artists was impressive. The staging has also greatly improved, including a colourful backadrop simulating an oriental town. The direction was smooth, and the master of ceremonies, Yitzhak Shimoni, was in his usual good form. The Mizmor Shir choral group, directed by Yosef Ben-Yisrael, contributed its clean and precise singing, joined by a promising youth choir "Se'u Zimra," led by Meir Levy.
